

FALLS 40 FEET INTO NICE SOFT BED OF CONCRETE

Fact That Floor Was Newly Laid Saves Life of Iron Worker.

It was a piece of luck for John Kimbel, an ironworker, that the freshly laid concrete on the fourth floor of the new Gainsborough Studio building, No. 232 West Fifty-ninth street, hadn't hardened this afternoon. As it is, workmen are now busy filling in the impression left in the soft substance by Kimbel's 200 pounds when that workman struck it after a fall of about forty feet.

Kimbel was adjusting red-hot rivets in the iron girders of the building and was astraddle of one of the girders when his hand came into sudden contact with one of the rivets. The shock of the slight burn caused him to lose his balance, and down he tumbled through the two floors.

The pavers had just finished laying the freshly mixed concrete and had put up an impromptu railing to prevent any one from walking on it, when plump into the gray much fell Kimbel. He yelled, and workmen who came on the run were surprised when he sat up and rubbed his head, looking a bit dazed. Then he stuck his finger into the concrete.

"Thank the Lord that stuff is soft," were the first words he said.

Dr. Cartmell was called from Roosevelt Hospital and looked Kimbel over.

"There's no bone broken, nor a bruise, nor a bump," said the doctor, "and you certainly owe your life to the softness of that concrete."

BRICKLAYER FELL FROM TENTH FLOOR SCAFFOLD.

Body Hit Standpipe During Plunge to Death, and Death Was Instantaneous.

While working on a scaffold on the tenth floor of an apartment house in course of construction at One Hundred and Tenth street and Broadway today, Miss Wyatt, a bricklayer, lost his footing and fell.

In his fall he hit a standpipe, and then fell to the ground, terribly mangled. An ambulance surgeon from the J. Hood Wright Hospital said that the man was killed instantly.

The accident so unnerved the other workmen that they quit for the day.

MRS. CLEWS, JR., DENIES.

Mrs. Henry Clews, Jr., and her two children sailed for Europe today on the White Star liner Baltic.

Before sailing she took occasion once more to deny that she and her husband were estranged and said she would join him in Paris.

"I've got used to what some papers print about me by this time," said Mrs. Clews, "and, though a few years ago these foolish rumors used to bother me, they don't any more. There was that story that I was ducked in a bathtub at a club ball in Baltimore. That was so ridiculous it made me laugh. Every body had a good time at the ball and we were very lively, but there was no vulgarly."

COL. F. M. LAWRENCE IS PNEUMONIA VICTIM.

The many friends of Col. Frederick N. Lawrence welcome news today that he is recovering from an attack of pneumonia, and may be up and about in a few days.

As President of the Union Club, formerly president of the Cuckoo Exchange and owner of many fast road horses, Col. Lawrence is widely known. His daughter is Mrs. Foxhall P. Reed. After leaving his office, No. 45 Wall street, the latter part of the week, Col. Lawrence was stricken, and on Tuesday he was almost despondent. He resides at No. 7 West Twenty-third street.
